

Images in medicine

Give me more gasoline

Dame más gasolina

Alejandro del Caño Garrido^a and María Gómez Caballero^{b,*}

^a Hospital Universitario Puerta de Hierro, Majadahonda, Madrid, Spain

^b Centro Médico Vithas, Majadahonda, Spain

Male patient of 45 years old with a personal history of paranoid schizophrenia, who consulted because, according to what he said, gasoline had been injected into his arm. At first, it was considered an outbreak of his underlying illness and was treated as such. However, a few hours later, the arm began to turn hot and red. The x-ray shown below was done, confirming the patient's words Fig. 1.

It is important to always listen to our patients and not take anything for granted.

Fig. 1. Left upper limb x-ray: edema and soft tissue content of the forearm is seen.

* Corresponding author.

E-mail address: maria_gc90@hotmail.com (M.G. Caballero).

Funding sources

This research did not receive any specific grant from funding agencies in the public, commercial, or not-for-profit sectors.

Publication ethics

We have the patient's consent for the presentation of the case.

Declaration of competing interest

We have nothing to declare.